NETFLIX: 13th

The College of Social Work invites you to a free screening of the Netflix produced documentary, 13th. This powerful film engages scholars, activists and politicians to trace the history of race in the United States, which has led this country to hold the largest prison population in the world.

Following the film, a facilitated discussion will focus on the role of social work practice and advocacy around race and mass incarceration. Two CEUs are available.

Wednesday, January 18

5:30-8:30 p.m.
